Every day U.S. troops leave family and friends behind to protect our interests around the globe. The effects are many fold. A spouse struggles with worried children as a parent is deployed. A veteran trying to make sense of combat experiences feels guilt about surviving when others did not.

The drop-in center welcomes veterans, military personnel and their families to:

- Deal with memories that will not go away
- Share stories
- Salute those who did not make it home
- Support for families of the fallen
- Find peer support in dealing with addictions, post traumatic stress, family issues, traumatic brain injury, and more
- Connect with others who have been where you have been
- Find job support and mentoring

The drop-in center is part of the Lake-McHenry County Veterans and Family Services Initiative funded by a five-year federal grant to transform the way veterans, troops, and their families receive services that support their emotional well-being.
